Albert Kellam was well known as the private driver for Captain John W. Stevens, one of the chief clerks in the office of Castner, Curran & Bullitt. He was about 45 years of age, educated, polite, quite respected, and an athlete and boxer, notable for his strength.

Kellam was going up-stairs to bed at the residence of Captain Stevens in Riverview when he cried out in alarm and fell over lifeless. Immediately efforts were made to resuscitate him, but they were unavailing, and Coroner Odendhal issued a permit for burial on account of heart

About five weeks ago Kellam was assaulted in Portsmouth by Robert Black-now, a negro man employed on the Seaboard Air Line Railway, who struck Kel-lam on the skull with an iron coupling pin. The negro was arrested and is confined in the jail at Portsmouth on the charge of maining. The theory of Kellam's friends is that his death is the re sult of that assault and blow; that it is due to a fracture of the skull and injury to the brain which occurred then and has been fatal after this lapse of time. These friends declare that a charge murder should be preferred against the Portsmouth assailant.

MR.S.W.HUFF TO BE GENERAL MANAGER

He Will Succeed Mr. Dimmock, Who Has Left the Passenger and Power Co. to Go West.

Mr. S. W. Huff, recently of Philadelobia, but a native of Virginia, yesterday assumed control of the street railways of Richmond as the general manager of the Virginia Passenger and Power Compary. Mr. W. S. Dimmock, who recently resigned the position to accept a handsome situation in California, left Richmond yesterday.

Mr. Huff is thirty-five years of age He is a tall, heavy-set, square-shouldered young man, who in ten years has held responsible positions in the management and operation of electric railway properties in a number of American cities, from Philadelphia to San Francisco. He comes to the local company with an equipment of valuable and varied experience and the best technical acquaintance with electrical matters.

For ten years Mr. Huff's sojourns in Virginia have been limited to a few hours or days at best. He was born in Alberiale county, near the Miller School, and is the sen of a Baptist clergyman who was afterwards chaplain at this school. For three years, from 1882 to 1855, he attended Richmond College. He is a newbor of the Southern Kaupa Alpha. is a member of the Southern Kappa Alpha Fraternity, After a year of teaching in Staunton and another at the Miller School under Captain Vawter, Mr. Huff decided to turn to electrical engineering, and attended Cornell University for two years, enjoying there probably the best advantages in technical and electrical hystruc-after teaching in Staunton, Mr. Huff edited the Staunton Vindicator for its proprie-tor, who was absent on account of illhealth. For three months one summer while at Cornell he worked as an elec-trician on the old Union or Clay Street line, in this city. This was about 1889, when electric railroading was in its in-fancy. It was a problem whether the Clay Street line could be made a success. In overalls the young college man worked over and under the primitive cars of this line all one summer, gaining his first acquaintance with the practical side of street railway operation.

After leaving Cornell about 1890 Mr. After leaving Cornell 2000t 1800 Mr. Huff was for some two years in charge of the line at Raleigh, N. C., where he married. GIFFEN COMPANY BIDS FAREWELL Actor Folk Made Pretty Speeches Before an Immense Audience.

YELLED FOR CHARLIE HAWKINS

Mr. Bennett Made First Speech and Other Members Cast Aside the Mantle and Spoke of Happy Times-Miss La Verne.

Henry De Mille and David Belasco never wrote "The Wife" with the intention that it should be a tragedy. It was penned a comedydrama and as such it has always been presented, even last night until the final curtain. Then the tragedy. It was the end of the Griffen Company's season and the parting words of the very clever company of actors, and as we may say friends, told that for the nonce the comedy had van-ished and drama, a real eragedy, stood before the audience and actor folk alike Theatmosphere during the four acts was heavy with the thought of every member of the vast addence that they were for the last, at least until some other time, looking upon their favorites. The same fever filled the actors and during the play it often broke between the lines in little byplays and careless line, tokens of some past pleasure that had been shared by those now acting possibly their last role upon the Richmond stage. It was a particularly sad event for Miss Lucille LeVerne, for with the fall of the last curtain her career upon the stage ended and she now enters a private life to be beside her husband, a non-professonal and a wealthy contractor.

It was not until the play was ended, and in fact the audience had risen to leave, that it seemed to realize that Southern hospitality was being neglected. Then with one impulse there was a call for speeches, after a long applause that brought the curtain up revealing the members of the company on the stage. MR. BENNETT FIRST.

Mr. Bennett responded to the call. In four words he expressed the prevailing sentiment—"This is the end."

Next there were yells, yes yells, for Mr. Hawkins, and when he came to the footlights the house fairly shook with the applause. Beyond question, from the demonstration, he was the favorite of

A storm of applause greet-ed him, and in response he told how he had admired the beautiful women of Richmond through a small hole in the curtain, and how he wished he was a sure enough actor, so he could be a matince idol.

Mr. Lamp, Mr. Dennett and Mr. Brook were the other members of the com-pany who were called upon to deliver speeches, and they did right smartly. Mr. Giffen was called for, but he refused to appear, not being in evening dress. and the curtain fell upon the last performance of the Giffen season of 1902. To-day the members will go to Both men are in the Memorial Hospital, but will soon be able to return to their homes and families.

Relallick's story in part follows:

"When I went to work Thursday morn-

"While walking around, or rather groping our way in the darkness, I never heard such sounds arise from human beings as the breathing of those miners. It was all that could be heard except for an occasional shrick or groan. Men were walking and crawling everywhere. Many were crying, some were praying others expressing wishes to see their wives and families before dying. Only half conscious as I was, only my death will blot that time from my memory. "Then the after-damp swooped in around us strong, and the miners began dropping as beeves at a slaughter. After they fell they would make one or two final gasps and then die."

est in the basket work course, and many of them are now thoroughly prepared to teach this to their pupils at home.

THE BENEFITS.

It will be seen from this that those who attend this school are improving their knowledge of the subjects which they teach, and at the same time getting the best possible instruction as to the most approved methods imparting knowledge and training children.

But this is by no means the only benefit. The teachers are learning a great deal from each other by swapping ideas, by exchanging experiences, and by giving to each pther words of good cheer and encouragement. Moreover, the teachers who attend this school are becoming more and more impressed with the dignity of their calling, and with the great responsibility which rests upothem. Professor Kent in one of his lectures the other day remarked that the teacher was apt to become a sort of doctrinaire, as the teacher generally laid down the law and had no one in the school to dispute his assertions. He thought it a good thing for the teachers to become pupils for a while, and so put themselves in the place of those whom they instruct. He added, by the way, that it was his custom to request the students in his classes to take issue with him upon any statement he might make which did not commend itself to them. He believed, he said, in a full and frank discussion in the class room.

AN INSPIRATION.

AN INSPIRATION.

This great normal school at the University is an inspiration to any man or woman who will visit it and look into the faces of those who are in attendance. No one can do this without being impressed that these teachers are men and women of character, of good social position in their respective com-munities, and thoroughly in earnest in the work which they are doing. Mr. Glass says that his chief complaint is Glass says that his energy companing that most of the teachers work entirely too hard, giving too little of their time to rest and recreation. But the teachers are there for a purpose, and they are determined to get the very best that can be had out of the opportunity.

SAMPLE OF TEACHERS.

This brings me to speak of another mat-

This brings me to speak of another mat-ter which the tax-payers of Virginia must also consider. These summer schools are doing more than all other agencies to train teachers, n fact, with the excep-tion of the Normal School, which turns out only a few teachers each year, this is about the only means of instruction that the teachers have. But the State of Vir-ginia is doing little to support the school, and many of the teachers are attending at and many of the teachers are attending at a great sacrifice to themselves. This can be readily understood when it is remembered that teachers who receive from one to two hundred dollars a year must pay out from thirty to fifty dollars in pay out from tallity to hisy utilities or order to attend these summer schools. Something ought to be done in some way to relieve the teachers. In part at least, of this burden, and that is a subject to which our wise men should direct their atwhich our wise men suggestions have been made which may be referred to hereafter by The Times.

I crhaps the most encouraging thing about this school is the statement made

All day incusands of men, women and children, drawn thither purely out of morbid curiosity, lingered about the low frame structure.

nothing of the larger attendance, it is conceded that there are many more first-class teachers in the schools than ever infore, and that the general average has been raised to a degree. There can be no doubt on this point. We have better teachers in Virginia to-day, many better teachers and much better teachers than ever before in the history of the public school system, and they are growing better all the time.

The people of Richmond will be gratified to know that more than sixty of our teachers, together with six principals and Superintendent Fox, are in attendance at the school this year.

THE SUPERINTENDENTS.

THE SUPERINTENDENTS.
In addition to the teachers, a number of county superintendents are in the school and taking the regular course of instruction. This brings me to speak of the important conference of the school superintendent which was held lest week. Instruction. This brings me to speak of the important conference of the school superintendents which was held last week. Mr. Frank P. Brent, secretary of the State Board of Education, is enthusiastic, and says that it was the greatest oducational conference he has ever witnersed. First of all the superintendents resolved that there were teo many schools in Virginia and that they would use their utmost endeavors to have the number decreased, thus increasing the proficiency and prolonging the school term. There were no two opinions on this point. The superintendents in conference are all thoroughly agreed that this must be done.

The superintendents also put themselves on record as being in favor of compulsory education. There was some opposition to this, but the resolution was carried by a large majority.

It was further agreed that the high school work in the rural districts must be improved and enlarged, and there be improved and enlarged, and there will be vigorous efforts in that direction. It was for this reason that the supeintendents generally were opposed to another normal school. They fear that if the school funds are diverted for this purpose there will not be enough money to improve and enlarge the high schools. UNIVERSITY AND THE SCHOOLS.

UNIVERSITY AND THE SCHOOLS.

This leads up to the most important work of the conference, and for that matter the most important work of any educational conference held in Virginia during this generation. I refer to the complete union accomplished between the University of Virginia and the public schools. Chairman Barringer has frequently referred to the university as quently referred to the university as the capstone of the public school system, but in point of fact there has not been alliance or harmony between the uni-versity and the common schools. But Chairman Barringer and the professors of the university met the superintendents in the right spirit and they had no diffiin the right spirit and they had no diffi-culty in coming to an agreement by which graduates of the high schools may easily obtain admission into the university. Dr. Barringer had said in his address that the university would meet the public schools half way and so under the new schools half way and so under the new arrangement graduates from the public high schools will have no difficulty in gaining admission to the university courses. The university has now become in fact as well as in theory a part and parcel of the public school system of Virginia and the capstone thereof. From this time on it will be the great high school of popular education. It is hard to say which side is most delighted with this consummation, the university pro-fessors or the superintendents and public school teachers.

WOMAN AND THE UNIVERSITY.

Mr. Glass has accomplished a great deal in bringing together the university professors and the teachers and superintendents of the public schools, and a most cordial and friendly relationship has thus been established. The next summer school will be held at the univermer school will be held at the university, and it is probable that this will be the case for many years to come. A wise man said in this connection that the women having had a taste of university women having had a taste of districtly training will demand more and more of such instruction, and he firmly believes that the time is not distant when the university course will be open to the women of the State who are searching after

PERSONAL MENTION.
This article would not be complete without saying that the inspiration of this splendid School of Methods is that modest but powerful man from the city of Lynchburg, Edward C. Glass. He is a wonder. He is a man of few words and never lifts his voice above the conversa-tional tone. He never appears to be busy, but he is the busiest man in the State to-day. He is a born teacher, he is an accomplished instructor, and he is a man of phenomenal executive ability. President Tyler, of William and Mary College, said in the course of his instruc-tive address that if Thomas Jefferson had the address that it inomas Jeterson had had such a man as E. C. Glass in charge of the work, he would have put his plan of popular education into effect during his life-time, and so would have been in advance of all the States in the Union. It is but just also to mention the fact that Mr. Frank P. Brent, Secretary of the Board of Education, has also been in-defatiguable in his efforts to promote the interests of this school and has done splendid work in bringing the teach-

Mr. Brent has done a public service for which the whole State should be grateinformation that the Richmond Educa-tional Association has taken a lively in-terest in the School of Methods and in the conferences that have been held, and has done its part toward making this grand educational rally the most notable
